Headline:
Mostly fine and dry.

Today:
Early fog patches clearing, then the vast majority of the UK will see a mixture of broken cloud and sunny spells. Feeling quite warm in light winds. Cloudier and breezier in the far northwest with some rain later.

Tonight:
Clearing skies for most, allowing a widespread frost to develop as well as a few fog patches. Cloudier in the far northwest with a little light rain for a time.

Saturday:
Cloud and light rain clearing from northern Scotland, else another dry day with patchy cloud and some sunshine for many.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Cloud and outbreaks of rain affecting Northern Ireland and Scotland on Sunday and Monday, moving southeast on Tuesday. Otherwise, dry, settled with sunny spells and overnight frost.
